World Premiere Episode of the Indie Van Game Jam Friday, April 4th!

Austin-based indie video game developer Binary Solo will air the premiere episode of the Indie Van Game Jam Friday, April 4th, 2014 on IndieVanGameJam.com and Youtube. Viewers will be able to download the game jam game created along the way for free, titled Second Person Shooter.

ABOUT THE SHOW:

Picture Man vs. Food meets Indie Game: The Movie; it's a documentary web series about the studios, games and personalities of developers who have turned away from the corporate publishing system and struck out on their own to create the games they love.

Each episode is a travelogue where Zeb West (designer), Chad Stewart (programmer) and Diego Almazan (artist) from Binary Solo set out from Austin, TX in the Indie Van to pose a question to an indie developer somewhere in North America.

Now for the twist: along the way, they attempt to answer the question themselves through a 'game jam', which tries to literally create a video game in the van that answers that question. Along with each episode, the results of the game jam will be available online for immediate download. The all-star line-up of indie game developers across the US and Canada includes Chicago's Rob Lach, Orlando's Phyken Media, Baton Rouge's PixelDash, Austin's Stoic, San Francisco's Sky Tyrannosaur, Eugene's Oregonik and Vancouver's KLEI.

The first episode features Chicago's Rob Lach, who created the art game POP Methodology: Experiment One. The team visits the Indie City Co-op, home to multiple indie developers, including Ryan Weimeyer of The Men Who Wear Many Hats, creators of Organ Trail.

ABOUT BINARY SOLO:

Binary Solo is a four-man team founded by Chad Stewart and Zeb West in Austin, Texas in 2013 to create compelling, story-driven games, and to celebrate and explore the vibrant scene of independent game development. Chad is programming and president, Zeb is production and design, Diego Almazan is the artist, and Scott Rosenkrantz is the filmmaker. They also act as the faces and personalities of the Indie Van Game Jam.
